Mr. Weisberg:

My typewriter is "down", so I am handwriting.

An idea for you - since the beginning of the new government there has been a wide-open, vigorous, ubiquitous and constant, virtually heavy handed, featuring of Hispanic Americans at every conceivable place in TV shows. It is obvious to me to be more than mere multi-channel coincidence; it appears managed and orchestrated.
Whether it is the shows themselves or the advertisements, things are such that after a week of such TV blitzing of one's brains, one would (unconsciously) expect to wake up in the morning and find that half of one's own family members are Negro (not to express a hatefulness or prejudice).
To me it is like seeing footprints in the mud - of someone/some group who did something. And I am reminded of the MLK assassination. That is, of its purposes and perpetrators possible motivations (anti uprising, anti riot, anti Viet Nam related).
One would suspect some government involvement in MLK as a matter of logical reasoning.

I suggest that if you can discover and identify the strangeness and its genesis, you may be able to develop and lock onto a track going in the MLK direction.
That is, having realized (somewhere) that assassination is no longer an endurance-reliable tool of crowd control, heavy PR is being used by TV means [which would have been more intelligent in the first place], especially in more recent trials in California and even elsewhere, the objective in common is to stem (mis) perceived trouble. An interesting hypothesis, at least.

Gesundheit!
